WITCH TROUBLE

STORY: MICHAEL J. PELLOWSKI
ART: ZECK

Georgie, the boy knight of the Round Table, was riding through an enchanted forest on his way home to Camelot. Georgie had just finished delivering an important message from King Arthur to one of his nobles. King Arthur always sent Georgie on the most important missions ever since the young knight chased a fire-breathing dragon back into the hills. Georgie was only a squire when he fought his first dragon and saved Princess Danielle, the Queen's niece. King Arthur had bestowed the title "Dragon Slayer" on Georgie and made him a knight as reward for his brave deeds. "I remember once when I fought a toad six feet high." said Sir Bragget who was Georgie's squire.

Georgie leaned back in the saddle of the gallant, white steed he was riding. He looked at Sir Bragget and shook his head. Sir Bragget used to be a knight himself. His trouble was that he talked about brave deeds but never actually did any. He was afraid of everyone and everything. His stories got him demoted from knight to squire. "A toad six feet tall?" asked Georgie as he stared down from "Charger's" back at Sir Bragget who was astride a donkey.

"Yes, Dragon Slayer." answered Bragget. "I used a mace to chase the web-footed beast back into his lily pond. I then fought an army of ants. Each ant was seven feet tall." said the squire as he twirled his black, handlebar mustache. He pretended to slice through the air with his dagger and knocked himself off of his donkey's back. "Whoa, Charger." ordered Georgie as he tugged on his horse's reins. "Do you speak truthfully, Sir Bragget?" asked Georgie. Sir Bragget looked up from the clump of weeds he fell into. "Would you believe a three foot lizard and four foot caterpillars?" asked Sir Bragget. Georgie just laughed. "Dragon Slayer, look!" shouted Sir Bragget as he stood up and picked leaves out of his hair.

Out of the bushes of the enchanted forest stepped an ugly, old hag. She had a long nose, a big wart on her cheek and she wore black clothes. She was also wearing one shoe. "You scared me, old witch!" snapped Sir Bragget when he saw that it was only an old woman. "Look, Dragon Slayer, the old crone is senseless. She walks through the woods wearing only one shoe." laughed the squire. "You will both pay for these insults!" warned the old woman. "I wear one shoe because I have a corn on my toe and my foot is sore. I am also a real witch." she screamed. She waved her hands in front of Sir Bragget and Georgie.

There was a flash of lightning and a clap of thunder. Smoke clouds blinded Georgie. When he opened his eyes he realized that he had shrunk to the size of a tiny ant. Charger was only as big as a beetle. "Help! Help!" called Sir Bragget who had also shrunk. Georgie rode through the grass which was as tall as trees. He saw Sir Bragget had climbed up a dandelion to escape a huge toad which was threatening to eat him. Georgie leveled his lance as he shouted "Charge!" and nudged Charger's ribs. Georgie scared the huge toad back into the bushes. "Help me! Dragon Slayer, where are you?" Georgie heard Sir Bragget call again. He raced back to the dandelion and saw giant ants climbing up the flower stem. Their pincers were reaching for Sir Bragget's trembling feet.

Georgie rode past the dandelion and pulled Sir Bragget onto Charger's back. The miniature warrior galloped safely away. "If we stay this size we will soon become an insect's dinner." said Sir Bragget as he hid behind a pebble. "I've got to make the witch change us back." said Georgie as he climbed down from the saddle. He pulled his sword out of its scabbard and fearlessly marched off towards the giant witch. She didn't see him. He stopped at her naked foot. He saw the corn on her toe which was causing her so much pain. "If I help her — she'll help us." Georgie said. With a single, mighty blow of his sword he cut the painful corn from her huge toe.

The ugly witch smiled because the pain was gone. She looked down at her feet and saw Georgie, the Dragon Slayer, standing near her big toe with his sword in his hand. She knew he'd helped her. She was so grateful that she decided to return Georgie, Charger, the donkey, and even Sir Bragget to their normal size. She waved her hand and the spell was broken. Minutes later, the Dragon Slayer and his squire were riding off. "I told you I fought a toad six feet tall." said Sir Bragget.
